Bees and Our Food

Bees are small, but their job is enormous. When they fly from flower to flower, they carry pollen, which allows plants to produce fruits and seeds. In fact, about one third of the food we eat depends on pollinators like them.

Unfortunately, bee populations have declined in many countries because of pesticides, habitat loss and climate change. Some farmers are now planting wildflowers next to their crops. This simple action gives bees food and shelter, and it can also increase harvests.
